School Overview

At World Journalism Preparatory, journalism is a tool used to share learning and practice the habits of critical thinking regarding citizenship and democracy. Student publications include a school newspaper, magazines, television programs, podcasts, websites, blogs, and wikis. Opportunities to immerse in journalism exist through fieldwork, creative projects, performances, interviews, and readings set in the community. The school has writing labs for parents as well as students. Students visit television networks, newspapers, publishers, colleges and other post-secondary schools.
