School Overview

Theatre Arts Production Company (TAPCo) is a public STEAM (Science, Technology, Engineering, Arts, Math) school in New York City. We offer students a unique educational experience in core academics, the performing arts, and visual arts through technology. TAPCo has two dedicated dance studios, a black box theater, a full-sized auditorium, a theater scene shop, a video sound stage, a radio station, two chorus rooms, and an art room for drawing, painting, and sculpture. We have strong partnerships with world-class arts organizations. Our students achieve college acceptance with over $1.5 million offered in scholarship and grants. We communicate with students and parents through our school website, daily morning announcements, and weekly student meetings with their staff agents. We also hold monthly town hall meetings and maintain an open door policy for all administration as well as an active parent association.
