

Robert Pizzo is a well established Bronx-born artist with a nationally recognized style and a wall full of prestigious design awards. (Well, technically, they're in a box in his basement but you get the point.)

After graduating NYC's School of Visual Arts, he began his career as trusted assistant to the legendary "Grandfather of Comics", Will Eisner, inventor of the graphic novel and creator of The Spirit.

Robert has produced thousands of illustrations for most major newspapers, magazines and publications as well as work for brands like Verizon, Coke, Pepsi, etc. through many of the nation's top advertising agencies.

His first children's book, The Amazing Animal Alphabet of Twenty-Six Tongue Twisters is published by Pomegranate and available everywhere including the Museum of Modern Art Bookstore in New York City and robertpizzo.com.
