School Mission Statement

The mission of PS 75, The Emily Dickinson School, is to be a learning environment in which a diverse community of children meets or exceeds high academic standards. We believe the best outcomes result from full school-home collaboration, and we seek to engage families in all aspects of their children's education.

Principal's Statement

At PS 75, we believe in academic excellence in an environment which celebrates our diversity. We use these principles as our guide for planning, implementation, and reflection.

Special Academic Programs

The school collaborates with Teachers College on the reading and writing project. Multisensory phonics is integrated into the early childhood classes. There is a dual language program, with two classes on each grade. The Arts are interwoven into the social studies curriculum.

Extracurricular Activities

The school has an early bird reading program and chess program. There is an extensive after-school program offering courses in the arts, chess, sports, and homework. Students run a bookstore named "Emily's," after the poet for whom the school is named. Music offerings include chorus, band and strings.

Community Support

The school has ongoing relationships with 25 community-based organizations, including the Jewish Community Center, Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts, MOMA, Symphony Space, and Barnard College.

Parent/School Support

The school enjoys great support from parents. We have an active PTA, which coordinates volunteers for literacy, fund-raising and special events. Parents are supported through extended day childcare activities, a multicultural workshop series, Spanish language classes, and parenting classes.
