School Mission Statement

The mission of the Millennium Art Academy is to use visual art and intergenerational experiences as catalysts for preparing students for the world of college, work, and community. Created on a humanistic premise, the school teaches students that there is a common human condition, that people of varying backgrounds have endured life obstacles at times but were later able to overcome them through perseverance and a strong belief in self. In the scope of academics, the instructional mission is for students to see the connections that exist among subjects, to engage in inquiry-based learning and research, to create portfolios where they must later defend either a body of work or a thesis, and to pass all Regents examinations required for graduation. Finally, the mission of the school is to teach students leadership through a special advisory curriculum that stresses civility and respect for self, family, and community.

Principal's Statement

Millennium Art Academy is an award-winning, new, small school designed to address the needs of each student holistically. The two main core components of MAA include its visual art program and its unique Intergenerational program. In the visual art program, students take college-level studio art classes, create interdisciplinary art/humanities projects, and exhibit their work at Sotheby's, the United Nations Chaplain Center, or Washington D.C. In the Intergenerational program, elders and students meet symbiotically to learn about one another and to connect on a profound humanistic level while creating and publishing a book entitled "Back In The Day."

Special Academic Programs

MAA has a before and after-school academy, as well as a Saturday Academy where students either take courses for credit, attend enrichment programs, and/or receive tutoring in Math, ELA, ESL, Regents, or S.A.T. preparation.

Extracurricular Activities

MAA offers: chess, drama workshops, poetry slam workshops, a ceramics/math program, robotics, anime, community mural painting, basketball, creative writing, school newspaper

Community Support

MAA's CBO partners include: Elders Share the Arts, the New York City Department for the Aging, DreamYard, NafET (National Academy for Excellent Teaching), and Saint Raymonds Community Outreach. All three organizations continue to play a vital role in the holistic functioning of school.

Parent/School Support

MAA has opened the Saturday Academy to include any parents who wish to participate in any workshops such as E.S.L., art, and chess. The P.T.A. is also assisting in sponsoring a school-wide Thanksgiving Feast, and a fund-raising event for charity.
